Background: In this module you have learned about Information Technology. Each day, you completed various exercises using this technology. These activities have taught you how to produce multimedia presentations, design documents in word processing, create web pages, generate electronic maps, and search for information on electronic encyclopedias. All of these components are essential to utilizing Information Technology.

Scenario: You have designed a new high performance skateboard. After testing it extensively, you feel that it is ready to be marketed. Having called the owners of several local skate shops, you have found one that may be interested in carrying your design. Before he can make this decision, he must get approval from his three partners. Fortunately, they are meeting next week.

However, the owner does not want to waste the partners' time. The owner would like you to create a presentation that explains the best features of your skateboard. Before you deliver the presentation, the owner would like to see your outline. He advises you that a professional, interesting presentation would impress the partners. This is your BIG CHANCE!

You will not be writing the actual presentation. You will be creating an outline of what you intend to present and what tools you will use in your presentation.

Here is what you need to do:

- 1st Paragraph: Write an introduction by explaining the above scenario in your own words.
- 2nd Paragraph: Explain what types of information technology, both software and hardware, you will use to create your presentation.
- 3rd Paragraph: Give three (3) reasons why a presentation report using multimedia is more convincing than a simple stand up report.
- 4th paragraph: Go out to the Internet and research words pertaining to your critical writing; include what you have found (IN YOUR OWN WORDS).
- 5th Paragraph: Write a description of what you plan to tell the partners to convince them that your skateboard is the best.
